What is claimed is:

(1)   A method for extracting content from a document, comprising the step of:

creating at least one selection envelope based upon a plurality of selection commands for locating specific content within said document; and 5   selecting content from said document based upon said at least one selection envelope.